Issues To Be Discussed

Issues (Rej., Obj., etc)	Claims Fig. #s	Prior Art	Discussed	Agreed	Not Agreed
-----------------------------	-------------------	--------------	-----------	--------	------------

(1) 103 rejection	1, 20, 43	Corey (5,987,446) and Sullivan (6,105,028)

Brief Description of Arguments to be Presented:

Corey and Sullivan, either alone or in combination, fail to describe or suggest searching indexed electronic content stored on a local device and searching electronic content stored on a remote device in response to a single query.

Corey describes using two different search techniques to retrieve items from the same common information item database 46. Corey does not describe searching both the content stored on a local device and the content stored on a remote device in response to a single query.

Sullivan describes a web browser that can access cached web pages when disconnected from a network without the user having to notify the browser that the computer is disconnected from the network. Sullivan does not describe anything related to performing a query using search terms and, thus, does not describe searching both the content stored on a local device and the content stored on a remote device in response to a single query.
